

Week's Social Happenings in Towns of State

MANTI.

The Cox-Whiting reunion, descendants of Frederick W. Cox, formerly a resident of this city, Orville Cox of Fairview and Edwin Whiting of Springville gathered in the Manti City park last week to enjoy a time of sociability in honor of their fathers and mothers who were pioneers into these valleys. There were present nearly two hundred descendants of the veterans mentioned together with a large number who have otherwise become connected with the family. About twenty-five tents and a number of wagons and carriages were located on the grounds, and an excellent program of songs, recitations, speeches, old-time reminiscences and amusements were given each day. Among the tents one was set apart for relatives, such as the old spinning wheel, primitive household utensils, farm implements, ox yokes and a vast amount of small trinkets which were of considerable interest at least to the younger generations, as they furnish them a faint idea of some of the difficulties the early settlers of this state had to contend with. Among the number of cities represented by those present at this reunion were Manti, Brigham, Fairview, Veneta, Grandville, Ferron, Provo, Beaver, Salt Lake City, Thurber, Orderville, LeGrande, Oregon, Ogden, Emery, Thursday last the family in their conveyances, formed themselves into a parade and visited all the places of interest in the city sightseeing and Thursday evening a band concert was given until about 8 o'clock, after which a grand ball was given at the opera house.
